cannon which the Russians will be unable to replace without the greatest difficulty. While the approach of the Russian reinforcements has delayed a decision, the fact that these reinforcements will not be able to arrive simultaneously with reinforcements from Warsaw will give the Germans a choice, military men assert, to attack before the reinforcements can combine.

The continual calling forth of new and larger reinforcements shows, it is said, that the Russians are aware of the seriousness of their situation. Local military critics believe that a decision is very near. They warn the public, however, to remember the enormous number of soldiers engaged and the great length of the battle front, which, although, the situation is favorable for the Teutons, still may delay a decision for a long time.
